

Science of Learning Strategic Research Theme

Science of Learning Public Lecture

Science of Learning Discoveries about the Role of 'Visual Sign Phonology' and Reading: Revolutionary Implications for Young Visual Learners

by Adam STONE and Geo KARTHEISER

Advanced doctoral students in the PhD in Educational Neuroscience program, Gallaudet University, Washington, DC, and

2015 NSF Student Scholars in the NSF Science of Learning Center, VL2, and Recipients of a NSF travel fellowship from the United States National Science Foundation (Dr. Soo-Siang Lim, NSF Program Director and Chair of Coordinating Committee, Science of Learning Centers Program) and the NSF Office of International Science and Engineering (Dr. Akaysha C. Tang, East Asia & Pacific Program Director)

Advisor:

Professor Laura-Ann PETITTO

HKU Sin Wai-Kin Distinguished Visiting Professor in the Humanities;
Full Professor, Department of Psychology, Gallaudet University,
Washington, D.C. USA;

Co-PI & Science Director, NSF Science of Learning Center, Visual
Language and Visual Learning, VL2

📅 11 July 2015 (Sat)

🕒 2:30pm – 4:00pm

📍 Rayson Huang Theatre, HKU

🌐 sol.edu.hku.hk/stone-kartheiser-public-lecture/

This public lecture is one of the Science of Learning Summerfest 2015 activities.
For detailed program, visit <http://sol.edu.hku.hk/summerfest-2015/>

Faculty of Education
The University of Hong Kong

Register Now!

